- Prices Subject to change without notice.
- Recommendations For proper assembly, a good quality lubricant should be used, or, when a fastener should be locked in place, the proper strength loctite should be used. When assembling a stainless bolt and locknut together, anti seize must be used to prevent galling or seizing. On applications where bolts are torqued, follow included instructions or refer to the Torque Chart, as the recommended torque for a stainless bolt may vary from the bolt it is replacing. Stainless fasteners are not "graded" like steel. Most stainless fasteners are rated at 100,000 to 125,000 psi except for Diamond Engineering's Race Proof[®] Series which are a minimum of 180,000 psi.
